New Hospital Building to Be Rushed to Completion

The new Board appointed for the new Wetaskiwin Community Hospital is comprised of four members from the M.D. of Montgomery, Reeve Ballhorn, Couns. V. E. Thompson, D. Wietrich and T. Angus, joined with three representatives from the City, Mayor J. W. Somers, Ald. A. E. Ellis and Mr. B. D. Howatt.

These gentlemen journeyed to Edmonton yesterday as a Board to interview Deputy Minister of Health, Dr. Bow, and other officials of the Department in connection with securing information for the construction of the new hospital for Wetaskiwin. Dr. Bow, along with Mr. MacKenzie, Provincial Inspector of Buildings, gave them valuable help, and after interviewing others interested in hospitals the members of the Board returned to Wetaskiwin where they held their first meeting of the new Board in the evening.

The full Board were present in the Council Chamber and on nominations being called for chairman, Mr. V. E. Thompson was nominated, and on his withdrawing, Ald. Ellis was elected chairman of the new Board, with Coun. Thompson as vice-chairman. Reeve Ballhorn was appointed as chairman of the finance committee, along with Messrs. V. E. Thompson and B. D. Howatt. J. E. Fraser, the present secretary-treasurer of the hospital, was appointed secretary-treasurer of the new Board.

As it will be up to the City Council to dissolve the old Hospital Board as soon as the agreements with other Districts expire on June 1st, the old Board will carry on the running of the present hospital until that time.

General arrangements were pushed forward for securing the services of a competent architect and inspector of works. Three separate contracts for the construction of the new hospital will likely be let out, one for the building, one for the plumbing and heating and one for the electric lighting. The Board decided that all contracts would contain a clause that local labor must be engaged wherever possible.

It was agreed that as many members as possible would visit other hospitals to gain information. After several other matters had been discussed as quickly as possible, the meeting adjourned.

MERCHANTS FINED FOR SELLING LIQUOR TO HOBDEMA INDIAN

When Pete Coyote came to Edmonton from the Hobdema Indian reserve Saturday he brought $150 worth of trouble to local merchants. In police court Friday morning before Magistrate P. C. H. Primrose, three local business men were found guilty of selling intoxicants to Pete who is a treaty Indian and was fined $50 and costs or two months in jail.

The defence of each accused was that Pete Coyote did not look like an Indian. One local grocer stated he thought that Coyote was a hold-up man and sold him a bottle of lemon extract to get rid of him in a hurry. "I was expecting a slug across the back of the head," said this man, "so I sold him the extract and asked no questions."

"What made you think he looked like a hold-up man?" asked the court. "He looked tough enough," was the reply.

Evidence revealed that Col. R. H. Palmer, Indian agent at Hobdema had been troubled with his charges obtaining liquor in Edmonton. A drive by A.P.P. police had previously closed down any trafficking in liquor with the Indians down the Calgary-Edmonton line but the red man had been able to get supplied in the city here.

Pete Coyote, enrolled as a decoy, was given a permit on the railway and came up to Edmonton Saturday. His trail picked up by police, he was followed through the city where he bought vanilla, lemon and orange extracts and rubbing alcohol from a grocery store on 97 street, a general store on 101 street and a drug store. When he had finished laying in his supply police picked him up and then visited the three places where he had bought the stuff.

Represented by counsel, each accused put up a fight that lasted close to two hours but the verdict of the court was against them—Bullseye.

The Mission Band played was down to date in that it taught the children the need of safety first in the midst of motor traffic. Spring was on the stage in the lovely dove scene put on by Mrs. Droleite's class, whilst the needed lesson of Peace was sweetly taught in the song of Mrs. Rodell's class; and the Easter message in Mrs. Wolfe's class program—"Fair Lillies."

U.F.A. LEADER URGES REFORM OF CURRENCY

Ottawa, April 15.—Reformation in the currency and credit system of the country has been sedulously advocated for several sessions by the Independent group in the house, and on Tuesday, featuring the resumed budget discussion was a sub-amendment which crystallized this idea. It was put forth by Mr. Gardiner, U.F.A. leader, under the rule which that parliament is no longer a two-party affair, permits of two amendments to the budget.

This one called for nationalization of the credit and currency. It would involve credit facilities for the community, not on the basis of profit, but on the basis of cost, while it would also contemplate elastic control of the value of the currency. The sub-amendment was moved as a Progressive proposition, and on the ground that the Liberal amendment failed to adequately meet the ideas of the more advanced school of thinking in the far corner of the house.

Leading up to the amendment, Mr. Gardiner bewailed the lack of effort by any country to control international finance, but foresaw the possibility of social betterment for the masses after the experience of the depression. Interest rates were denominated in terms of the dollar, that a 10 per cent rate was impossible. Mr. Gardiner would say five per cent just as impossible. He unfolded his idea for a nationalization of credit and currency, accompanied by the suggestion that the government should "take" bank savings into circulation.

To the tariff part of the Liberal amendment, he could subscribe, but if that amendment represented the sum total of the Liberal policy, he found it inadequate. Something more drastic, more fundamental, was needed; and that something he sought to prescribe in the sub-amendment he then presented.

BIG LIBERAL RALLY IN EDMONTON JUNE 16 TO 19

Edmonton, April 18.—Delegates representing Liberal organizations in all sections of the province will convene in Edmonton from June 16-18 to elect a leader of the provincial forces in succession to J. W. McDonald, K.C. of Macleod, who recently resigned, and to formulate a new provincial platform.

Mr. McDonald tendered his resignation to the provincial executive just prior to the commencement of the recently prorogued session of the legislature. It is expected that fully 500 will be in attendance.

The question of provincial leadership is one that is engaging the attention of Liberals in all sections of Alberta. There are many logical and strong contenders for this post.

George H. Webster Liberal house leader for the past two sessions, and for many years one of the outstanding party workers in Southern Alberta, is considered a strong candidate, providing he will stand.

W. R. Howson, Edmonton, is another strong candidate. His inextinguishable store of energy, force in debate and keen analytical faculties are such as to commend him to a wide circle of admirers.

Hugh J. Montgomery, Liberal member for Wetaskiwin, is considered another strong starter with L. A. Goroux Grouard, also favored by many.

Old Irish Customs and Superstitions

In England, red-haired women were very fashionable a few decades ago, but in Ireland it was just the reverse. People do not like meeting a red-haired woman when starting out to do any work. She is a sign of bad luck before them, and if they are wise, they turn back and put off the work, whatever it is, until the next day. This is very often inconvenient, especially for the woman. A lady who lives in a very remote part of Ireland, was walking one morning along a road which led to the little harbor where the fishermen kept their boats. The lady's hair was a quite harmless shade of brown, but she had, as a companion, a girl whose locks even an admirer would have hesitated to describe as auburn. Her head was actually brilliant. The lady was amazed to find herself suddenly caught by the arm and dragged into a ditch by the side of the road. There she and her companion crouched for some minutes until the fishermen had passed. "If they had seen me," said the girl in explanation, "they'd have been gone out fishing today, they'd have had no luck if they did." That girl must have had a trying time in life. It cannot be pleasant to have to dodge your fellow-creatures during the early hours of every day. But a girl of any beauty, feeling, would, of course, submit to any amount of inconvenience rather than paralyze the industry of all her neighbors. A girl is not ostracized or despised because her hair is red. She stands just as good a chance of getting married as her dark-haired sister. I suppose the familiarity of married life in some way breaks the force of the evil spell. Otherwise, I do not see how a man with a red-haired wife would ever succeed in doing anything. It would be immensely difficult to avoid seeing her some time in the morning before the day's work began. So much for the red-haired girl.

It is unlucky for a stranger to enter a house where churning is going on, unless he puts his hand to the dash and takes some part in the work. He need not do much, but he must at least give one plunge to the dash, otherwise the butter will not come. There is no satisfactory explanation to this belief, but it is supposed to be connected in some way with the influence of fairies over the milk. The whole business of butter-making is a mysterious one. Scientific people pretend that they understand it and explain the curious facts that butter sometimes comes readily, and sometimes will not come at all, by saying that there are differences in temperature and such things. This kind of scientific materialism is merely silly. You can't chase away fairies by threatening them with a thermometer. The most highly instructed dairy-maid finds herself, in spite of all her precautions, baffled by the inexplicable behaviour of churns. "Fairies" who still play some part in Irish life are generally spoken of as the people. A kindly Englishman was entertained at tea shortly after he arrived in Ireland, by a farmer's wife, a well educated woman and sufficiently rationalistic to be one of the Protestants. The Englishman was apologetic for offering her guest jam instead of butter. "I have no butter," she said, "for the people took it from me last week. The Englishman, indignant at such robbery, suggested as an Englishman would, that she should complain to the police. The woman laughed at him. "The police," she said, "what use would police be when it was the people that took it."

The absurdity of setting the members of the Royal Irish Constabulary to arrest a fairy, justified her mirth. The fairy in the churn is, alas, disappearing. He cannot get along in the modern creamery. The whirling separator annoys him. Sir Horace Plunkett, who is responsible for most of the Irish creameries has been accused of many things. The system of butter making which he advocates is supposed to result in the starvation of calves, the extreme delicacy of the children, and a general decay in the health of rural Ireland. It is curious that no one has yet thought of attacking him for driving the fairies into exile.

In Ireland they have a very proper respect for the season of Lent, and very rarely indeed does anyone get married during its forty days. After Lent is over, rural Ireland is much too busy for marrying. The turf has to be saved then, and from that on, until the harvest is gathered in, work of every kind is pressing. Marriages tend to be crowded into the weeks between Epiphany and Ash Wednesday. This period is called, in the west of Ireland "Seraff," corruption, we are told of "shrift," and so related to Shrove Tuesday. Thus it happens that anyone who is unmarried at the beginning of Lent is likely to remain unmarried for a year. Dr. Joyce, in a book about Ireland, tells of a curious custom which prevailed in Munster on the first Sunday in Lent. Those young men who should have been married, but were not, were marked with a heavy streak of chalk on the back of their Sunday coat by boys who carried bits of chalk in their pockets for that purpose, and lay in wait for the bachelors. The marking was done while the congregation was assembling for Mass, and that particular Sunday was known as Chalk Sunday. Another similar custom related by Dr. Joyce is that on the great Skellig Rock in the Atlantic, off the coast of Kerry, are the ruins of a monastery to which people at one time went on pilgrimage and a difficult pilgrimage it was. The tradition is still kept up in some places though in an odd form. In connection with the custom, that marriages are not solemnized in Lent, namely, after Shrove Tuesday. It is in the memory of some persons still that, in the south of Ireland, young persons who should have been married before Ash Wednesday, and were not, were supposed to set out on a pilgrimage to Skellig Rock on Shrove Tuesday night. The following is the song sung to represent this custom:

"As young Rory and Moreen were talking,
How Shrove Tuesday was just drawing near,
For the tenth time he asked her to marry.
But, says she, "Time enough till next year.
Then, Ochoen, I am going to Skellig."
"O, Moreen and what will I do?
'Tis the woeful road to travel,
And how lonesome I'll be without you."

The custom of lighting fires on John's Eve, Midsummer Day, is still prevalent in the west of Ireland, and shows no signs of dying out. It is of immense antiquity and comes from the pagan ancestors who celebrate the day of the Sun's greatest strength by acts of fire worship. Christianity, in its conquest of paganism, took over a great many customs connected with the worship of old gods and incorporated them into the Church system by giving them a new significance. The bonfires on St. John's Eve escaped this process of naturalization and refrain today without any religious meaning.

All Hallows' Eve is another festival which is faithfully observed in most parts of Ireland. Like the bonfires of St. John's Eve is of pagan origin, being the old Irish "Samhain" feast, but it has to some extent been Christianized by its connection with All Saints' Day. There are a great many curious reports in connection with this festival, which differ in different parts of the country, and special kinds of foods are eaten. "Sovans" is a kind of gruel, used on All Hallows' Eve in the north of Ireland. The name is really the old "Samhain." "Barmbrack" is a kind of cake that is eaten on many festive occasions but is especially connected with All Hallows' Eve. This cake is raised with yeast and enriched with currants and raisins which give it a spotted appearance, hence its name which is derived from the Irish word "Borreen" meaning a cake and "Brea" which means spotted.

Another dish called "Caulcannon" is also eaten on All Hallows' Eve. It consists of mashed potatoes with which cabbage, chopped up fine, is mixed, and a lump of butter is placed in the middle of the dish.

St. Stephen's Day, known in England as Boxing Day, brings the "Wren boys" to our doors. The "Wren" was regarded in old Irish literature as a teacher and there is a legend which blames it for the betrayal of Ireland to her English conquerors. Some such idea may lie at the back of the determined persecution of this bird in the hands of the Irish boys, but I doubt whether any of them have any idea of why they carry dead wrens about on St. Stephen's Day.

A very beautiful custom survives in the west of Ireland in the use of Christmas candles. They are long thin candles sometimes weighing a pound. One is lit in every country house on Christmas Eve and left burning all night. The door of the house is also left open. The idea is a truly pious one, is that there should be a light and welcome in every house that night for the Son of Man should He return to earth. A somewhat similar custom but unconnected with Christianity, consists in leaving a saucer of cream ready for the fairies on All Hallows' Eve. The "people" (meaning the fairies) are supposed to be abroad in great numbers that night, and the voluntary offering of cream averts their displeasure. Irish children are warned not to eat blackberries after the first of November, because the fairies in their wanderings on All Hallows' Eve put some kind of blight on the fruit that renders it unwholesome.

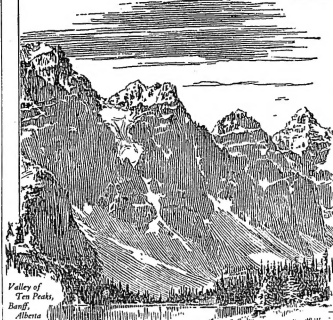

A whole book might be written about the theories of disease and the cure of it held by Irish country people. Some of the older people display an extraordinary amount of medical skill. There was an old woman who knew whether the patient was going to die or not by the feel of their ears. She was never able to explain how the ears guided her, but she was generally right. A doctor once declared that a certain person could not possibly live till morning. The old lady felt the poor man's ears and then assured the man's wife that there was not the slightest fear of his dying. The wife was greatly cheered and in due time the man recovered. The wheezing cough is one of the plagues of childhood in Ireland. It is called "chin cough" a corruption of "kink cough" so called because it brings on a kind of confused and painful fit. Children used to be taken to the gas works and made to breathe the air with a flux of tar in it. The modern treatment is plenty of fresh air, but this does not seem drastic enough for the Irish mother. She has a treatment of her own. If you want to cure a child of "chin cough" you go out in the cold, alone with the child, until you meet a man riding a white horse. Him you must civilly and ask him what he recommends for the child. He may say anything, but whatever he says, you do, and your child will rapidly get well.

A cry on the coast can be cured by laying seven thorns plucked from a gooseberry bush on the affected spot. Cases in which styrs looked threatening have been known to disappear after being treated with the thorns.

"Fearsythes" is a disease of a most deadly character, which may be common elsewhere, but has not, I think, been classified and explained, except in the west of Ireland. It is a kind of faintness which comes on people who take long walks over the mountains and is sometimes fatal. The name "fearsythes" means hunger grass and it is supposed that a kind of grass grows in small patches on mountain sides, and is possessed with this peculiar quality. Anyone walking over it is seized with faintness like that produced by starvation. Irish people believe it is caused by a malevolent demon, a kind of malign fairy who attacks people upon mountains.

In the case of dog bites many people believe in the curative value of a hair taken from the dog that bit you. A gentleman who lived in a small western town was given a present of a well-bred and valuable dog. Not long after a small boy was bitten in the leg. Almost immediately afterwards the gentleman received a letter from the previous owner saying that although the dog was a very desirable one, it had one great fault. It couldn't stand the sight of bare-foot boys, the letter said, and always went for them, and that's the reason I had to get rid of him, he has cost me twenty dollars in the last month for compensation. In the country places there are a lot of bare-foot boys, and if it had cost twenty dollars for the dog, he would have been where there were few bare-foot boys, what was it going to cost in Connaught, where there were lots of bare-foot boys? In due time the father of the bitten boy turned up. He stated his case with some force and showed that his son had been bitten severely. Then he hesitated. The owner of the dog waited anxiously to hear the amount claimed, and felt that he could hardly dispute it. "Your Honor," said the father, "if it isn't asking too much, would you give me a hair out of the dog's tail?"

The relief of the owner was immense. "Take the hair," he said, "take all the hairs there are; take the tail itself if you like." "Sure, and that would be too much," said the father, "I want a hair to lay on the bite in the young lad's leg." "Look here," said the owner, "I set no particular value on the dog, and his license is paid for a year, suppose you take him home and keep him altogether! Then, if you want another hair you won't have to come again and ask for it." The father of the boy departed, taking the dog with him and later on the dog had to be drowned, but that was, in all probability after all the hairs had been plucked out of his tail.

The Irish peasant has a long memory, but a curiously capricious one. Certain events in their past history have left a score of tales behind them. Very ancient legends, too, of giants and pagan heroes, have sur-

From November, 1931, to April 7, the provincial Red Cross received from the Alberta division of the National Emergency Relief Appeal committee the sum of $35,391. Practically the whole of the money has been spent in relief throughout the province, and it is estimated that at least 34,000 persons have benefited thereby. Of this total some 27,000 are city residents and the remainder live in the rural districts.

Growing Screens

There are few gardens, indeed, where one cannot work in screening material to advantage. Even if there are not dog kennels, water hydrants and telephone poles to be hidden, the general lay-out is improved where all is not visible from one point. Of course, permanent screens are only produced by the use of perennials, such as evergreens, shrubs and long-lived climbers. But quite satisfactory results can also be secured by selecting the right type of annuals. For instance, African Marigolds, Cosmos, Ornamental Sunflowers, Larkspurs and other bushy fairly tall plants will make satisfactory screens by early July. Among the climbers of an annual nature there are Morning Glories, Nasturtiums, Sweet Peas, Hops and Scarlet Runner Beans.

Improved Varieties

There has been rapid improvement in the horticultural world in recent years with the result that many varieties of flowers and vegetables today are hardly to be compared with the kinds grown a decade back. The principal aim of plant breeders in the vegetable line is to get more quality and also more hardness so that there will be more variety in Northern gardens. In beans and peas, for instance, the gardener is offered something now that is very much more tender than the old standbys, though, unfortunately, the average person does not seem to realize the improvements brought about, and still orders the beans and peas that were popular in the past. The taller sorts of garden peas, with their very large pods, yield just as much and sometimes more than the old-time American Wonder, and they are much sweeter and more easily picked and shelled. In beans, the newer varieties are absolutely stringless and will keep in tender shape much longer than the old sorts. Beets, carrots and turnips among the roots, for example, are smaller in size today and very much more tender than the kinds that were so popular years ago. It is not so long since corn was regarded as a tender crop in Ontario for the simple reason that one could not get a variety early enough to mature much before frost. Nowadays thanks to improvements, one can get corn to mature in the warmer districts of the Prairie Provinces, and can produce green corn for the table over a very wide range of territory. In Northern districts, where something extremely early is wanted, there are varieties now which will be ready for use from ten days to two weeks after the old standard Golden Bantam. There has been similar development in tomatoes and other more tender vegetables. When one turns to flowers, the improvement has been even more startling, though of course fashion also enters into the picture. Many old single flowers can now be secured in doubles and strange enough many of the doubles, like the aster, are now also available in beautiful singles. In fact, style seems to be swinging towards daintily single petal flowers and pastel shades.

First Things to Plant

If the ground is ready now, one may get in the first vegetables and flowers, but it is important to make sure that soil conditions are right on each coming work. If the earth compacted when taken up and squeezed in the hand, keep away, or if one's boots become really muddy after tramping over the garden the time is not yet arrived for working up the soil. However, if it crumbles, rather than packs, one can go ahead. In the vegetable line, sow those things of which the leaves are eaten first. These include, lettuce, cress, spinach, radish and mustard. There is little danger from planting them too soon as all will stand some frost. The first of the peas should also go in as early as one can yield them, and as those sown late. Next in line will be those bulbous roots or vegetables such as beets, onions, carrots, early turnips and parsnips. At this time, too, the first of the potatoes are planted, although not as hardy as the others mentioned. Frost is a potent enemy to frost until the plants come through the ground which will be in from a week to a fortnight after planting, depending upon weather conditions. Repeat planting of practically all the early vegetables every ten days until about the middle of June so that the harvest season for these will be extended. In the third planting group will come the really tender things, such as tomato plants, melons, cucumbers and egg plants, which are best kept indoors or under glass until all danger of frost is over. Among the hardiest annual flowers are the calendula, candytuft, alyssum, California poppy, cosmos, calliopsis, larkspur, poppy, linaria, Virginia stock and sweet peas. The latter must be sown as early as possible. After danger from frost has practically disappeared, zinnia, nasturtium, aster, stocks, balsam, snapdragons, marigold and gladiolus may be planted. Dahlias and cannas are a little more tender and should not go in until all danger of frost is past.

SPRING FARMING OPERATIONS START IN ALBERTA

A start has been made on the task of seeding Alberta's 1932 grain crop. As usual the farmers in the southern part of the province are first on the land. From now on, provided weather conditions are suitable steadily increasing activity will be noticeable throughout the countryside. Last year Alberta farmers seeded 8,000,000 acres to wheat, 2½ million acres to oats, 724,000 acres to barley, 152,000 acres to rye, and 120,000 acres to flax. Present indications are that there will be a small decrease in the acreage sown to wheat and possibly an increase in the acreage sown to oats. In the northern part of the province the land is very wet, so spring and wheat seeding may be delayed to such an extent that oats will be substituted. Oats was comparatively profitable this crop year. Moisture conditions are good in the north and in the central part of Alberta. In the south reports indicate that along the foothills moisture conditions are fairly good and in the eastern and south eastern portions there is enough moisture to start the grain. The area that has been affected by drought for the last three years will likely show some curtailment of acreage under wheat due to lack of finances, but extensive efforts have been made to provide the farmers with seed and feed sufficient for their requirements. The provincial department of agriculture estimates the summer 'fallow' land in the province at 3½ million acres. The fall ploughed area is somewhat smaller than previous years.

ALBERTA PROVINCIAL INCOME TAX ACT

The provisions of the new Income Tax bill passed through the legislature are briefly as follows: There is a filing fee of $3.00 on all taxpayers. This fee will not require to be paid by persons filing their return but who are not liable for income tax. The per cent of rates on persons is as follows: Income up to $2,000 tax 1 per cent. Incomes $2,000 to $4,000, tax 2 per cent. Incomes $4,000 to $5,000, tax 3 per cent. The rate then increases 1 per cent on each $1,000, up to $25,000, maximum 25 per cent. The exemptions are: Single persons up to $750 income. Married persons up to $1,500 and $400 allowance for each dependent. The following is the schedule of taxes payable on incomes up to $100,000:

$ 500	$.50
1,000	1.50
1,200	2.50
1,500	4.50
1,800	7.50
2,000	10.50
2,500	15.00
3,000	20.00
3,500	25.00
4,000	30.00
4,500	35.00
5,000	40.00
6,000	50.00
7,000	60.00
8,000	70.00
9,000	80.00
10,000	90.00

In addition add a base tax of $3 to the amount shown in the above tables. With regard to the base tax or filing fee, it is explained that this is in addition to the amount payable by all taxpayers. It is imposed for the purpose of helping to meet the cost of administering the Income Tax Act. While the Dominion Government imposes no such fee, it is collected in some provinces and states and amounts in some cases to $5.00. Dealing with corporations, the memorandum shows that the rate on all net incomes or profits in excess of $1,000 is 4 per cent. Exemptions from the tax are to be granted to corporations, specially taxed under the provisions of the Corporation Taxation Act, banks, railway companies, insurance companies, express companies, grain, land and loan companies and telegraph and trust companies. Gas and electric power companies will be entitled to deduct from the tax payable the amount paid under the provisions of the Corporations Taxation Act. Here is how the tax on persons will work out; for instance a single person whose income in 1931 was $800 would have an exemption of $750, which would leave $50 taxable. On a 1 per cent basis the tax would be 50 cents, according to the schedule, but in addition such person also would have to pay $3 base tax or filing fee making a total tax of $3.50. Take a married man with two children, whose income in 1931 was $2,750. Would first have a total exemption of $2,300, made up of $1,500 given to all married persons and $400 for each child. His taxable income would be $450, which on a 1 per cent basis would make his tax $4.50. Also he has to pay $3 base tax so that his total amount would be $7.50. For a married man without dependents whose income was $4,000, the tax would be $30 after allowing for exemption. In addition, he would have to pay the $3 base tax, making his total $33.00.

ALBERTA SCHOOL TEACHERS WIN IMPORTANT VICTORY

Teachers won a victory over school boards and the department of education Wednesday when the unanimous decision of the appellate division of supreme court in the test case of John Steele Smith, a school teacher, against the Acme school district was handed down in Calgary. The court ruled that the new provision of the July, 1930 amendment to the school act was retroactive. In other words, it held that even though teachers were employed under a contract complying with the old act, dismissal must be made in accordance with the provision of the 1930 amendment, which provides that permission of the school inspector must be granted to make dismissal legal. Previously all that had been required was 30 days notice to the teacher following opportunity for him to discuss cause for dismissal with the trustees. Steele-Smith was dismissed by the Acme school board in June, 1932, under terms of the contract which was drawn according to the old act. He held that this was illegal, since the new act imposed a new requirement that had not been fulfilled, and entered claim for $50 against the school district. Mr. Justice Ewing upheld his claim, allowing the damages. The school district entered appeal from the judgment, but the appellate division upheld the trial judge in their decision Wednesday, ruling that the inspector's permission was necessary even in contracts under the old act.

WHITEFISH EGGS FOR LAKE NEWELL

Five million eyed whitefish eggs will be planted in Lake Newell, near Brooks, by R. T. Rodd, provincial fisheries commissioner assisted by A. Griffith, of Brooks, Walter McHugh and other residents of the district. The whitefish stocking in Lake Newell is an experiment as there were no fish of this species in the lake previously. It will take about four years for the whitefish to develop to the usable stage but the success of the experiment can be determined in probably half this period. Lake Newell is already inhabited with pike, which are utilized commercially and also for sport fishing. Its population also includes suckers although these are discouraged as much as possible. Mr. Rodd visited Calgary Thursday en route to Brooks with the eggs and he was confident that at least a fair trial would be given the whitefish to this new habitation. He reported that the commercial hatchery at Lesser Slave Lake had enjoyed a very successful season. Altogether about 149,000,000 whitefish eggs had been gathered for this hatchery but as the accommodation was limited, 15,000,000 had to be returned to Lesser Slave Lake and Whitefish Lake. 50 million of Grouard. Mr. Rodd estimated that the loss would not be more than nine per cent and might be as low as seven per cent whereas last year it ran to slightly more than twelve per cent. Two varieties of whitefish are involved, the Labrador whitefish from Lesser Slave Lake and the common whitefish from Whitefish Lake. Eggs of the common Labrador variety were placed in Lesser Slave Lake last fall in this type reproduces more rapidly than the Labrador. The table use there is practically no appreciable difference between the varieties. Whitefish stocking will be done in various lakes to replenish supplies but no new waters will be affected outside of Lake Newell. Perch and pickerel stocking will be done in suitable waters mainly north of Calgary. Chestermere Lake

"After 25 years of farming—in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Montana—I recognize the Bradley 'Armor Point' share as a great contribution to agriculture."—William T. Copland.

BILL COPLAND says

Mr. Farmer: You will get longer service and better plowing with this share, because it keeps its "suction" and "land".

"Armor Point" Double Life Plow Shares

You men who have had years of plowing experience know how important it is for a share to keep its shape at the point. The downward dip of the share at the point makes "suction" possible, and, of course, "suction" is positively necessary to good plowing. As you know, every good plow share is made with a set that keeps the point of the share hugging tight to the furrow wall.

But most shares are made with soft, unprotected landsides, and when used for any length of time the point will have worn away so that both "Suction" and "Land" have been destroyed.

Study the illustration below. See how Bradley "Armor Point" shares are made—with point of landside protected on under side, and also on side next to land, with a hard steel wear resisting "Armor" plate. This is a patented Bradley feature, no other share is completely armored at the point. Once you use a Bradley "Armor Point" share you will buy no other make—your share's expense will be less, your plow will do better work, you will have less frequent need of sharpening, and your shares will last longer. The Bradley "Armor Point" share is one of the greatest contributions to agriculture in recent years. There are numbers to fit every make of plow.

Wetaskiwin Players at the Audien Wednesday Night

Final rehearsals are being held this week in preparation for the appearance of the Wetaskiwin Players at the Audien on Wednesday evening next. In Larry E. Johnson's three-act comedy "Sweetwater Trail," a story of the Mounted Police of Western Canada stationed at a village in the open spaces where "everything comes in this from Toronto." The playwright who scored a great success with this production in the best cities of the continent is himself of Canadian birth and thoroughly acquainted with the atmosphere which prompted his highly successful efforts. Among his other successes is listed "Her Step Husband," which broke all box office records when presented by the Wetaskiwin Players three years ago. With hilarious comedy predominant throughout, "Sweetwater Trail" has its tense moments, a love tale and accompanying divorce activities being most entertainingly interwoven with the distribution of bad whiskey among the redskins and a mysterious gun affair engineered by a master mind which in the finale brings two hearts together.

This production has been played in stock as "The Horse Wrangler," and could aptly be referred to as "The Girl from Toronto" in which event the little role would fall to the lot of Mrs. Ada McFarlane, who Director Bart Bellamy is pleased to announce is making her debut in amateur theatricals in the principal feminine role. Mr. Bellamy takes his greatest "kick" out of amateur theatricals in the development of new talent, and, having sprung some real "surprises" on previous occasions, feels justified in nursing considerable optimism in his newly-acquired talent, including such well-known personages as Herb Schmidt, Ben Burland and Dr. Janzen. Mr. Bellamy himself takes one of the principal roles, and Ed Peterson has been identified with the Players for some seasons, and Major Godfrey Baker has enjoyed an enviable reputation as a past master in comedy roles. George Beau rounds out the male element.

Mae Bidinger and Nan Drolet appeared in prominent parts in "Turn to the Right," and "The Cat and the Canary," and Misses Lauretta Vickers, Asta Vold and Edna Johnson will undoubtedly measure up to the high standards of their previous accomplishments.

A special program of music, in keeping with the theme of the occasion, will be rendered between acts.

by the Wetaskiwin City Band, and this in itself will prove a most pleasing surprise.

"Sweetwater Trail" is being presented under the auspices of the Wetaskiwin Sports Association, which has never failed to satisfy a fastidious public.

CONSCRIPTING INCOMES OVER $20,000 URGED

Ottawa, April 14.—An income of $20,000 or $25,000 is sufficient for any Canadian and anything above that figure should be conscripted by the state, the House of Commons was advised yesterday by Robert Gardiner, leader of the United Farmers. As a prelude to the introduction of a sub-amendment to the budget, he suggested limiting the practice of usury and taxing into circulation the vast total of Canadian savings.

GRADS ANVANCE INTO DOMINION FINALS

Edmonton, April 17. — Nimble Witches from Vancouver turned toward their Pacific Coast home today, defeated in their attempt to wrest basketball laurels from Edmonton's famed outfit, the Grads.

The girls from the coast city took their second defeat Saturday night at the hands of the Grads 35-56, and lost the two-game total-point series 198-101. By the victory, Grads qualified for the Dominion ladies' basketball championship as no signs of challengers from Saskatchewan or Manitoba have appeared.

BASEBALL

The managers of the Wetaskiwin ball team wish to express their thanks to all those who purchased advance tickets for games, which supplied funds to properly organize.

Managers Atkinson and Jacobs urgently request all those interested in baseball, players and fans, to appear on the diamond Friday, at 6:45 p.m., for the purpose of getting the season away to an early peppy start.

Bruce Thirk, one of our last year stars after attending a ball school in Los Angeles during the past winter, has accepted a position on the Vancouver lineup.

Zene Clelland, who was out of the game last season, due to an operation, will be back on the lineup, and his ability as a pitcher and third sacker will be a big help, along with G. G. Farewell and Lefty James for mound duty.

ONE VIEW OF HOCKEY

Now that the hockey battles are over for this season in Wetaskiwin, with very few casualties, it might be of interest to get one fellow's theory of the game as he sized it up after watching the contest for the first time.

Hockey, as an outstanding game is a combination of football, golf, soccer, prize-fighting and tug-of-war.

It is a crime wave on ice. It is one man dashes into another on a slippery street, knocks him down and bashes him between the eyes with a crooked stick, it is unpremeditated assault. This, done in a rink, is what is called "first-class hockey."

Spouting enthusiasts who like their thrills served fresh every second and who consider any sport dull when any of the contestants are in an upright position, have found what is ordered. Here at last, is a game played while every contestant is in the act of falling over on his back.

It makes baseball seem like a casual exercise prescribed by the doctor for old gentlemen with stiff joints. Beside it football looks like something thrown into a nursery to keep the children out of mischief.

It is a battle between two teams of six men each none of whom care a single thing about his physical future. A small black rubber heel is what the battle is over the aim of each team being to deliver it into a cage, guarded by a youth whose people evidently never gave him any good advice.

When it is time for a hockey game to commence, the referee skates to the centre of the ice and rings a bell. This is a signal to all players, nurses and internes to get ready for business. He then drops the rubber heel and fuses for his life. The heel is then battled for by the opposite teams on the basis of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth and a broken nose for a try at the goal cage. During the carnage, the busiest individual in the place is the goal tender, who has to stop more missiles than the City of Rheims stopped German shells.

After the end of the final period, surgeons examine the goal tenders, the game being awarded to the side whose goal tender has the best chance of recovery.

One very noticeable feature of the game is that no matter what decision the referee makes, there's always a bunch somewhere who "boo-hoo" him.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

A teacher asked, "Can anyone tell me the meaning of the word 'collision'?"

No answer. The teacher explained: "When two things come together unexpectedly, that is a collision." Then the teacher asked:

"Now can anyone give me an example?"

Little Jimmy: "Twins."

WILL DISCONTINUE GRADING OF CREAM BY GOVERNMENT

Edmonton creamery operators received notice Friday from the provincial daily commissioner, that government cream graders will be withdrawn after May 15 and manufacturers will be required to engage licensed graders on their staffs. There will be no break in the high standard of Alberta cream grading. It is said, because the inspectors of the government that now supervise the grading done in 75 smaller creameries of the province will include a qualified grader among their workmen, will now be extended to supervise closely the grading done in the centralizers or larger plants.

The change is made to comply with repeated demands by the operators, who paid for the government graders' work in their plants, and contended that if the graders were on their own staffs, part of their time could be utilized for other work and costs of grading reduced for the producer who really bore the burden.

Official notices state that the change meets the plea of the operators "for drastic reduction in operating costs at a time when cream and butter prices are abnormally low."

It was intimated that the government graders would be free to accept other employment after May 15. This will affect 17 graders on the government payroll but it is anticipated that most of them will be absorbed into the industry and inquiry indicates that probably seven or eight licensed graders would be required by Edmonton operators with plants in and out of the city. Calgary, Wetaskiwin, Camrose and other centres affected would likely absorb the rest.

This change will bring the Alberta cream grading into line with that of Saskatchewan which employs the inspector system.

HAULTAIN DEFEATS LONE RIDGE IN FINAL DEBATE

On Wednesday evening, April 13, the U.F.A. hall was filled by an appreciative crowd to hear Haultain and Lone Ridge debate for the championship of the Wetaskiwin Riding League. The subject was "Resolved that collective farming offers greater advantages than individual farming." Haultain upheld the affirmative.

Both sides were ably represented, Haultain by Messrs. Pritchard, Mountain and Fraser, and Lone Ridge by Messrs. Sparks, Steedman and Wallis.

After a spirited and closely contested debate between the youthful Haultainers and Lone Ridge's veterans to m, the judges, who were Mr. Ross, Ed. Peterson and Mack Sears, declared in favor of the affirmative by a vote of two to one, to the very evident approval of a large section of the assembled multitude.

Accordingly the Haultain team were declared the champions for 1932 by the chairman, who also gave a brief outline of the activities of the League during the past season. In all, six district debates have been held, covering many subjects of public importance, and distinct progress has been made by those taking part. The committee in charge of the League, Messrs. J. G. Baker, H. Benlin and H. G. Young, wish to thank all those who assisted in any way during the past season, and most particularly those who gave their services as judges. It is hoped that next season will be even more successful, and it is hoped that an early start will be made next fall.

SPRING'S ADVANCE CHECKED BY HEAVY FALLS OF SNOW

Toronto, April 13.—The weatherman showed supreme contempt for the calendar today in Ontario. According to everybody except himself this is, or was, spring. Robins had chirped merrily; flowers were appearing; geese were flying north and poets were writing yards and yards of spring song. Boys played marbles girls skipped. But all that was last week.

Today the rusted runners of sleighs were leaving their tracks in snow. Skis are appearing. Cars are skidding. Geese have stopped their northern flight. And the poets are nursing colds in the head.

From many parts of Ontario come similar reports of heavy snow.

Signs of rain were blown in the dull grey wall of dust, blown out of the flight and covered about 20 acres, where, some spots in the countryside reporting it was impossible to see more than a few feet ahead. Soil drifting was reported everywhere.

In the vicinity of Regina, numerous farm trucks and autos were stuck in the drifted soil. In some places these drifts measured from ten to 60 feet wide and six inches to two feet in depth. Highways were almost impassable. Railways had gangs of men out trying to clear away drifts along the trackage south of here. Tracks were reported covered by about a foot of sand and soil.

It involves a 10 per cent discount on all existing obligations to the company and on all new purchases of implements to the extent of payments prior to the end of next November.

SOVIET STATE FARM SOWS WHEAT BY AIR

Airplanes roaring along at a speed from 60 to 75 miles less than 100 feet above the ground recently demonstrated the feasibility of sowing wheat from the air on a Soviet state farm in central Asia.

The planes, each equipped with a sowing "spray" 65 feet wide, sowed an area of about eight acres on each flight and covered about 20 acres a day. In just a fortnight four planes sowed 8,000 acres.

LONG LIVE THE DEPRESSION

Long live the depression! That's what I say. I don't like work and have always tried to avoid it. In the so-called good old days before the depression I had a hard time getting 'by and often had to do some chores for a meal. Now, thanks to the relief camps, I am a respectable gentleman of leisure. I eat regularly three times a day. The government has outfitted me with clothes and shoes and supplies me with free smokes. Some kind folks have sent magazines and playing cards, but we could do with some rubbing alcohol, as we are getting weak in the back, and so far the government has not issued any. However, there is always someone trying to take the joy out of life. I hear rumors that we are to go to work to earn our board. I hope it is not true, as this suits me fine. Once more the northward trek is on. Fifty families have been moved into northern Alberta since the beginning of April, and it is expected that from now on there will be a steady movement, probably equalling that of last year, when 422 families were taken care of. Practically all the settlers thus far during the present season have gone to the Peace River country or to intermediate districts and have taken up land that they are either homesteading or selected definitely in advance as one of the conditions of approval of their applications.—Journal.

SUFFERED FOR YEARS FROM CONSTIPATION

Mrs. C. Ratus, 28 Vernon St., Halifax, N.S., writes:—"I had suffered for years from constipation. For several days at a time my bowels would not move and only when assisted by laxatives, and after a while each kind of laxative I would take seemed to lose its effect until, finally, a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and since using same have had no trouble, and I am greatly pleased with the results I have had from these pills."

MASQUERADE

Helen's mind was not on feeding the hens or gathering the eggs. Mechanically she scattered the wheat for the fowls' supper and looked in each nest for eggs. Her mind was on the masquerade dance to be held at Belmont that evening, and she knew she could not get to it. Alfred had mentioned it to her but two weeks ago, but had not asked her to go. Still she had felt certain he intended to later, or he would not have mentioned it. Then Wednesday he had telephoned to say he had to go to Austin for a few days and wouldn't be able to see her again this week.

"Sorry, girle," he had said, "but I'll be thinking about you all the time and will come out to see you as soon as I get back."

So that had been an end to that rosy dream and it would be a lonesome week-end. Most of the young people in Burnsville district did not go as far as Belmont to dances, but Alfred Furnival had a position there and had taken Helen there to shows and once to an Old Fellows' dance. It had been wonderful and Helen had been looking forward with thrills of pleasure for days to this masquerade. But then, was not all the world glamorous since she had met Alfred two months before at a picnic.

She thought, as she returned to the house with her basket of eggs, of the lovely Kate Greenaway costume in jade green she had planned. Alfred had once said that green made her long hair look like spun gold and her cheeks like rose-petals. Since Wednesday she had not looked at the material, and it still lay uncut in a dresser drawer.

She had dutifully helped her mother with all the many household tasks, had practiced her music and read the last magazines, but it seemed as though Sunday (the earliest possible time she could hope to see Alfred) were infinitely remote. Only Friday now!

Perhaps John would call and ask her to go to Literary Society tonight, probably not, she had snubbed him so many times lately. If he did, she believed she'd go. Perhaps time would not seem quite so endless. She and John had once been good pals, but now he seemed so slow and quiet.

Alfred was dashing and gallant, gay and witty, up-to-the minute, and had glorious long-lashed dark eyes. Dad called him "that lady-killer" somewhat contemptuously, but mother said nothing. She seemed to understand, though once or twice Helen had vaguely suspected her of aiding and abetting the waning cause of John. Her mother met her at the door now, relieving her of the egg basket as she said "You're wanted on the phone, Helen. I'll put the eggs away."

Helen hurried. Perhaps Alfred had returned sooner than he expected. With quickened pulse she took the receiver and said "Hello." The hello that came back was not Alfred's. It was John's. Of course, hadn't she just been thinking of him. Silly to feel so overwhelmingly disappointed. What was John saying, "Hello, are you there?"

Trying to collect herself she answered, "Yes, but I didn't hear what you said."

"I said would you like to go to the masquerade in Belmont tonight. Sis and Toby are going and want us to go with them."

"I'd love to go, John, but I've no costume."

"Never mind. Sis says she'll fix you up. She says to do your hair down in curls and she'll bring along a costume."

"All right, John. I'll go if I don't have to be comic."

"Sis says it's all right and you'll like it. We'll come along early." She left the phone with her melancholy swept away. She could almost forget that Alfred was so far away. Her first masquerade! She was really to go after all! It would be fun.

Supper eaten and cleared away, she flew to her room and arranged her hair as Gerlie had directed, in long silky curls. Then Gerlie and the boys arrived. Gerlie had on an old-fashioned dress that her mother had worn as a girl. For Helen she brought a snappy gay with pink and blue flowers and a broad floppy garden hat to match, that tied with a blue bow under her chin.

"It looks lovely on you," exclaimed Gerlie. "It's too bad to put a mask on. And those curls! You ought to wear your hair that way always. Maudie Ratter in Belmont does."

Gerlie and Toby Martin were a jolly pair. They had a jolly ride. Helen suddenly realized that she had not thought of Alfred since supper. Only as they entered the hall did her thoughts go back to the time she had been there before with Alfred. Oh, well, she was there for a good time. No use to be gloomy now. And anyway she felt like someone different behind her mask. She enjoyed the gay scene, the varied and fantastic costumes, the brightly decorated hall; the floor was good, the music was good, and she did not lack for partners.

It must have been about half-past eleven, when the orchestra beginning a waltz, when a figure she knew, a man gay and dashing with dark eyes ineffectually masked, bowed before her. She rose with knees trembling, momentarily speechless, and took his hand. They glided into the waltz. He bent his head to whisper under her hat brim, "You sweet thing. I'd have been here sooner if I had known you would be here. I thought you couldn't come."

"It was rather unexpected," she said, her face flushed and unnatural. "How did you know me?"

"Know you? I'd know you in China. Of course I know those golden curls. And haven't I seen you wear this hat dozens of times in your garden? I'd know you anywhere, Maudie."

Maudie! This hat that she had never seen before! He didn't know her. He was making love to someone else!

Helen felt as if she would faint. She could not speak, but concentrated on making her feet keep time and step.

"Maudie," he was beginning again, "how am I going to get to see you soon? I know your grandmother won't have me around. But listen, little sweetheart, I'm getting a new job in Austin in another month and I want to tell you all about it. Your grandmother shouldn't keep you caged up like that. Run away. We wouldn't be the first couple that ever eloped."

Helen's head whirled, her breath choked her. "I can't talk now," she managed to say. "Let me sit here a few minutes. Please find me a drink."

As Alfred disappeared, she slipped from her seat and walked quickly around the room to where she could see John standing near the door.

"John," she gasped, "get me out of here quick. I'm smothering for a breath of fresh air."

"All right. You get your wraps and I'll see Toby and tell him we're going for a spin."

In the dressing room Helen tore off the deceiving hat and mask, pinned up her curls and slipped on her coat and beret. She felt better to be herself again. Stepping from the dressing room she came face to face with Alfred carrying a glass of water. "Well, Helen, you here too," he exclaimed.

"Yes," she answered. "I and all the other lovely ladies."

He gave a quick glance, but her face was innocent. "Have you just come?" he asked.

"No, just going," she replied, moving as if to go.

"Stay long enough to have a dance with me," he begged.

"Oh, I think I've danced enough for tonight," still moving on.

"Helen, why the cold shoulder? I would have been out tonight if I had been back in time. You'll let me come out and see you soon, won't you? I want to tell you all about the new job I've got in Austin."

"And persuade me to run away from my grandmother?" she questioned over her shoulder, and slipped out the door leaving him staring blankly after her.

Seated in Toby's car with John at the wheel, she drew a long breath. To John it sounded like a sigh.

"Wasn't that Furnival you were speaking to just before you came out? I hadn't noticed him earlier."

"Yes," she replied. "He came late."

There was an odd note in her voice and John heard that too. As he drove he spoke casually of the road, the car, the wonderfully starry night. Helen answered in monosyllables, her thoughts still on the last half hour, making her comparisons and adjustments. Conversation dropped and they drove in silence, cleaving the blackness surrounding them with their bright beacon.

Then John said "Sure you still want to go for a drive? We can turn back any time if you'd rather be dancing."

"Look here, John," she demanded,

TOURIST TRADE PROFIT PAYS CANADIAN DEBTS TO FOREIGN NATIONS

Montreal, April 16.—Canada's tourist trade returns for 1931, published this week, offer the most solid piece of encouragement that official figures have contained in recent months. They reveal that one of Canada's most fruitful "industries" has continued to flourish even in the midst of depression.

Foreign visitors spent $250,000,000 in Canada last year. That represents a drop of 12 per cent from the tourist takings of 1930, but since Canadian prices had meanwhile fallen 10 per cent, the actual volume of our trade with tourists obviously shrank very little. We sold them almost the same amount of goods and services at slightly lower prices than the year before.

The importance of this can only be measured by the importance of the Canadian tourist trade itself. In the whole list of our commerce with neighbor nations, it forms the largest item. There is no Canadian product sold abroad in equal volume with this "cash and carry" business which tourists bring to us, and none whose returns are as widely distributed among our population.

Canadian wheat and flour exports last year totalled $138,000,000; newsprint and all other forest products combined fetched us $135,000,000 in the export market; metals and metal products of all sorts less than $93,000,000.

The quarter billion of foreign cash that tourists spent within our borders was equal to more than 40 per cent of our whole income from regular export trade. It represents a balance of $174,000,000 in excess of what Canadian tourists spent abroad last year, and that balance is probably sufficient to cover the whole of Canadian debts payments to foreigners for the year.

TWO FORESTRY DEPTS. MERGED

Edmonton, April 15.—Better administration of Alberta's forest resources, at substantially lower cost, will result, according to Hon. E. G. Reid, minister of lands and mines, from a reorganization of two important branches of government service under that department. The forestry and timber services which heretofore have been carried on as separate branches, are being amalgamated.

A saving of $40,000 in salaries alone will be effected by the change, says Mr. Reid. Re-arrangement of the forestry reserves will also be made.

GOITRE

In the front of the neck is situated the thyroid gland. This particular organ belongs to the group of glands which produce a secretion that is passed directly into the blood stream, and which are known as glands of internal secretion. The thyroid is an important gland, and serious disorders occur if the gland produces too much or too little of its secretion.

The most common change which takes place is an enlargement of the gland, described as "simple goitre." This condition is apparently the result of insufficient iodine in either the food or the water, or in both. It occurs most frequently during adolescence and is more prevalent in certain localities than in others.

Simple goitre is readily cured provided the patient is placed under treatment when the swelling is first noticed. Iodine given in the proper quantities will prevent simple goitre, but it should be taken according to the directions of a physician.

It is necessary to warn against the indiscriminate use of iodine. The success which has followed the use of iodine in preventing simple goitre has led many to believe that iodine will cure or aid all forms of thyroid disease. This is a mistaken idea and it has resulted in a great deal of harm.

There are conditions other than simple goitre in which the thyroid gland is enlarged. The use of iodine in such cases is not to be considered unless the patient is under observation by a physician. Iodine is a substance with which we are familiar and we have become accustomed to applying it freely to breaks in our skin; however, we should not fail to understand that it is not to be taken internally, as treatment, unless prescribed.

The progress which has been made in treating goitre is one of the real achievements of modern medicine. Successful treatment is, in many cases, made difficult on account of the use of iodine, in an injudicious manner, by the patient before coming for treatment.

When there is an enlargement of the thyroid gland, there is only one safe course to pursue, and that is to find out what form of enlargement it is—as there are several forms, goitre—and then have proper treatment prescribed.

This note of warning against the self-prescribed internal use of iodine as a means of treating all goitres is necessary, because iodine is being so used and the practice is causing much needless suffering and harm.

Questions, concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 134 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Creameries of this province for the four weeks ending February 27, received $72,570 pounds of butterfat in cream, a decrease of 1,959 pounds or .2 per cent under receipts for the same period in 1931 but an increase of 396,665 pounds over the corresponding period of 1930.

SAYS SEED OATS IN PROVINCE ARE FROST DAMAGED

From results obtained in germinating oat samples by the Dominion seed branch, a considerable portion of oats obtained in the province have suffered from frost damage, according to a warning issued by the branch in Calgary. The report continues:

"Many lots are damaged so badly as to be unsuitable for seed. In some cases the damage is not readily detected for many lots that would appear to be of good quality are showing very low germination. It also appears to be the case that the vitality of these damaged oats is decreasing as the season advances. Many lots that showed fair vitality in the fall and early winter are growing very poorly when rested this spring."

"The condition appears to be quite general over the entire province but would seem, from the results obtained by the branch, to be most severe in the Parkland area. Farmers living between Calgary and Edmonton along any of the railway lines between these points will be well advised to have definite knowledge of the germination of their seed oats, and the same is true of those living in parts of the Peace River area and at some stations adjacent to Edmonton. While other portions of the province are affected to a slighter extent, a proportion of samples from the entire area show markedly low germination and care should be exercised if disappointment is to be avoided.

"It should be considered that such damaged seed is not only likely to produce a thinner stand of grain when seeded at regular rates but the plants themselves are likely to be of low vitality and unable to stand unfavorable conditions after seeding. Such plants are more likely to be lost."

"In order to make sure that seed will germinate satisfactorily, farmers are advised to test their own oats. This may be done readily by counting out two lots of kernels representative of the bulk lot of the grain and placing them between damp wool or blotting paper or better, shallow-planting them in soil in flower pots. They should then be placed in a window on the south side of the house and kept moist. At the end of six days the plants growing well, represent those seeds that are of strong vitality and the total at the end of twelve days will show all that are likely to grow even under the most favorable circumstances.

Dr. Wood's Neglected a Cold On Her Chest

Norway
Pine
Syrup

Mrs. R. Jewsbury, 1122 View St., Victoria, B.C., writes:—"I had suffered, for several months, with a cold on my chest. I neglected it for some time thinking it would pass off, but it got worse. All the remedies I tried proved futile until I became alarmed. One day my husband went to the druggist and told him that everything I had tried did not help me in any way. He recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before I had finished the first bottle I was relieved."

Price 35c a bottle; large family size 65c, at all drug and general stores; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Axel Bengtson, a dear husband and father, who passed away on April 20th, 1930.

Two years ago today he was called to his eternal rest.

Come to Paradise, where Jesus went,

And taken when God knew best.

We miss the one we loved so dearly,

Who has forever been called away.

But we all hope in heaven to meet,

Where never we will part again.

"Nothing can ever take away

The love a heart holds dear;

Fond memories linger every day

Remembrance keeps him near."

—Deeply mourned by his wife and family.

WHO PROFITS?

A farmer in the Three Hills district, Alberta, is reported to have shipped 21 pullets to Calgary. Eight of the pullets, which graded No. 2, and weighed 30 pounds, were valued at five cents per pound, or a total of $15.00. The rest of the pullets were marked "No value." These weighed

33 pounds. The price the farmer was supposed to receive, however, was gross. There was a freight charge of $1.50 and other charges of 25c

so that on the entire shipment he actually lost 25 cents.

Another story from the States.

John Simpson, president of the U.

S. Farmers' Union presented evidence showing that W. B. Estes, a farmer at Littleton, Colorado, sent to the A. A. Blakely Co. at Denver,
